Understanding State Statutes on Minimum Marriage Age and Exceptions

(Last updated: May 24, 2018)

The chart below serves as a legal resource for understanding state statutes on minimum marriage age in all 50 states and the District of Columbia. It highlights the youngest age at which an individual may legally be married (the age “floor,” if specified by statute) in each state and DC, provides the text of key statutes on issuing marriage licenses to minors,¹ and links to the statutory text.

Most states require the parties to be at least age 18 (the typical age of “majority,” or legal adulthood) to marry without parental consent or judicial approval. Age 18 is therefore often referred to as a state’s “statutory minimum marriage age.” That term can be misleading, however, because statutory exceptions that apply if there is parental consent or if a judge approves of the marriage, and/or in case of pregnancy, can in effect drop the true minimum marriage age much lower. In fact, many states actually set no bottom-line age floor by statute (that is, a lower limit below which a child cannot be married, even if exceptions are met).

Lax statutory exceptions based on parental consent (which can hide parental coercion) or pregnancy (which can be evidence of rape) can actually facilitate forced marriages and often leave older minors especially unprotected. Most states allow parties between the ages of 16 and 18 to marry with parental consent alone. Many states also allow parties younger than age 16 to marry with judicial approval and/or if one party is pregnant or has had a child. Even when judicial approval is required, however, serious gaps in protection exist. Among many other shortcomings, judges are often given little to no guidance for their decision-making, and minors are seldom appointed counsel or afforded other rights in those proceedings. As a result, judges can serve to rubber-stamp parental consent rather than act as independent gatekeepers against the abuse and exploitation of children in the guise of marriage.²

A growing national reform movement is building momentum, as states recognize that current laws put children at unacceptable risk. Since the Tahirih Justice Center spearheaded the enactment of a new law in 2016 that made Virginia the first state to limit marriage to legal adults, some 20 states have taken up reform bills, and several states have enacted new laws.

At a Glance: How Do State Laws on Minimum Marriage Age Compare?*

- Only 1 state – Delaware – sets the age floor at the age of majority, age 18, with no exceptions.
- 20 states do not set an age floor by statute, though some (e.g., Massachusetts) may set an age floor through case law.
- 5 states require parties to be legal adults: Delaware (age 18 or older), Texas and Virginia (age 18 or older or age 16-17 and emancipated by court order), and Kentucky and New York (age 18 or older, or age 17 and emancipated upon grant of petition for permission to marry).
- 6 states require parties to be at least age 17: Florida, Kentucky, Nebraska, New York, Oregon, and Tennessee. Nebraska also requires parental consent until age 19, that state's age of majority.
- 15 states require parties to be at least age 16: Alabama, Arizona, Connecticut, Georgia, Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Montana, North Dakota, South Carolina, South Dakota, Texas, Vermont, Virginia and Wisconsin. The District of Columbia also requires parties to be at least age 16.
- In 10 states, clerks alone – without judges – can issue marriage licenses for all minors: Florida, Maryland, Nebraska, North Dakota, Oregon, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Vermont, and Wisconsin. The District of Columbia also does not involve judges.
- Only 13 states require all minors to go before a judge before they can marry: Alabama, California, Connecticut, Georgia, Iowa, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Montana, New Hampshire, New York, Texas, and Virginia. Some of these judicial processes are bare-bones, while others set several criteria for approval.
- In states with judicial approval requirements that apply at least to younger minors or under certain circumstances, only 17 states require judges to consider the minors' best interests.
- Statutes in a handful of states – Arkansas, Mississippi, New Hampshire and Ohio – either set different age floors or set different conditions for approvals based on a party's gender.
- 7 states expressly permit pregnancy to lower the minimum marriage age: Arkansas, Indiana, Maryland, New Mexico, North Carolina, Ohio, and Oklahoma.

* This updated compilation reflects all bills introduced since 2016 that have become law by May 24, 2018, even if some more recently enacted laws have an effective date later in 2018.

States that have made legislative reforms to end or limit child marriage and the effective dates of those new laws are: Virginia (July 1, 2016); New York (July 20, 2017); Texas (September 1, 2017); Connecticut (October 1, 2017); Delaware (May 9, 2018); Tennessee (May 21, 2018); Florida (July 1, 2018); Kentucky (July 14, 2018); and Arizona (August 3, 2018). The new laws in Delaware and Tennessee became effective upon signature by the governor.

Tahirih’s report, a short backgrounder on child marriage in America, and other key resources are available at www.tahirih.org/childmarriagepolicy. ² Marriage license data obtained from several states, for example, reveals that judges have approved marriages of young children to much older adults. See statistics and examples cited in June Leffler, “As Child Marriages Drop, Hundreds Still Marry in Kentucky Each Year” (Kentucky Center for Investigative Reporting, August 29, 2017); Anjali Tsui, Dan Nolan and Chris Amico, “Child Marriage in America: By the Numbers” (PBS Frontline, July 6, 2017); and Nicholas Kristof, “11 Years Old, A Mom, and Pushed to Marry Her Rapist in Florida” (New York Times Op-Ed, May 26, 2017).

⁸ All parties applying for a marriage license, under the law prevailing before recent legislative amendments, were also required to submit social security numbers, or if a person did not have a social security number, another form of identification. They were also required to submit statements specifying whether the parties completed a premarital preparation course and whether they accessed information contained in a handbook on the rights and responsibilities of parties to a marriage. Prior law also conditioned the right to a waiver of a 3-day waiting period between the issuance and effective date of a marriage license on whether the parties had completed a premarital preparation course, among other terms regarding possible waivers of that waiting period. The newly enacted law on minimum marriage age recodified and slightly rephrased this section of the law and these requirements, but did not substantively alter them.

¹¹ This language appears at Section 7 of the legislative reform bill recently enacted in Kentucky.

¹⁵ This provision is what emancipates the minor alongside granting the minor permission to marry.

¹⁸ The recent legislative amendments did not expressly strike references in existing Tenn. Code Ann. §36-3-106(a) and (b) to minors “sixteen (16) years of age” or older when adding new subsections to that section. Still, taken together with amendments to Tenn. Code Ann. §36-3-105, the state has now set a statutory age floor of 17.

¹⁹ Legislative amendments made in 2017 to the minimum marriage age in Texas were accompanied by additional amendments to address concerns about forced marriages of children: “forcing or coercing a child to enter into a marriage” was added to the definition of “child abuse” and thus to the mandate of Child Protective Services to investigate (see Tex. Fam. Code §261.001\(1\)\(M\)) and also added to the definition of “family violence” on which basis a family violence protective order could be issued (see Tex. Fam. Code §71.004\(2\)).

²¹ Texas’ separate statutes under the Family Code Chapter 31 governing the process and criteria for a minor to be emancipated re-dated recent legislative amendments to the state’s minimum marriage age, and were not affected by them. In order to be eligible to emancipate, a minor must be 17 years of age, or at least 16 years of age and living separate and apart from the minor’s parents or guardian, and must be self-supporting and managing the minor’s own financial affairs. The court must appoint an attorney to represent the interest of the minor at the hearing, and must find that emancipation is in the best interest of the minor. Thus, minors in Texas who wish to marry do not petition a court for permission to marry as such. Instead, they may petition a court to determine that they meet the criteria for emancipation and therefore to be granted the legal rights of an adult, including (but not limited to) the right to marry.

²⁵ Statutory clarifications made in the 2017 legislative session in Vermont, and effective July 1, 2018, modified the language of this statute, and added provisions on incestuous or bigamous marriages. The text in this compilation reflects the language that will be effective as of July 1, 2018. Note, however, that the recent legislative amendments did not substantively change the restrictions or requirements for minors to marry Vermont.
